Hi. So I'm working on changes and suggestions on a separate Word document that Reed will also edit. We'll then cut and paste our suggestions into Gitbook one time to avoid some confusion.

Popping in here.

Would you mind adding legal disclaimers directly under paragraphs that need clarification in italics?

And then any language that needs to be changed leaving comments?

The Gitbook is so large that I'm afraid it would create a logistical nightmare to move between documents.

We can work from screen shots or pictures. Not a big deal since we won't be editing master doc.

I'm not seeing an ability to invite which is really strange. Working on this..

Morning. I'm not being allowed to open the gitbook link. Can you resend?

Thanks

Hello Reed & Marc,

We need your legal approval and expertise on our written Gitbook content here.

We are looking for feedback in three forms:

1. If you find grammatical errors you can edit the text directly in-line
2. If you find that a paragraph or section needs a specific legal disclaimer please do not edit the text directly, but instead add an additional paragraph below in italics.
3. If you find any text that is not legally compliant even with a paragraph disclaimer, please do not change it directly. Instead, add a comment with the issue and your suggested change.

Finally, feel free to add a unique legal disclaimers page as you see fit.

If you have any questions feel free to reach out.

We will need a revved Gitbook within a few days. Happy to coordinate!

Warmly,

| Steve
